Art At Work

CBC and Saskatchewan Film and Video Development Corporation (SaskFilm) are pleased to enter into a partnership on the Art at Work project sponsored by the Saskatchewan Arts Board.

The CBC and SaskFilm will have the opportunity to work with Donald Stein, a composer and audio artist, on a variety of projects that will incorporate art into the workplace with our staff and our buildings.

In a career spanning over twenty years, Donald Stein has explored the vitality and changing nature of many arts disciplines: theatre and musical theatre; video and film scoring; contemporary dance; visual and performance art; new media and web-based art; orchestra work and chamber music; and Japanese classical music. As Associate Director of the Banff Centre for the Arts from 1995 through 2000, Stein developed international relations and exchange agreements with many countries. He is currently the Executive Director of New Dance Horizons in Regina.

He will be in residence in the CBC building and Saskatchewan Canada Production Studios from October 1, 2004 to February 28, 2005.

Regina was designated the 2004 Cultural Capital of Canada. The Saskatchewan Arts Board, in partnership with the City of Regina, is pleased to celebrate this great honour by creating a number of corporate and community projects.

With an emphasis on tapping workers' creativity, ten Regina workplaces will have the opportunity to work with an artist, (visual, musical, performing, oral storytelling, literary, multimedia, dance, or another discipline), to realize the vision of becoming one of the most compelling places to work in Canada.

Participation in this project will require visionary leadership, staff who exhibit a love of learning, and organizations that embrace opportunities to work in partnership with community.
